Our expanded immunisation learning pathways

We have expanded our immunisation learning pathways to support anyone working in Primary Healthcare.

Let's explore the options.

The Immunisation Support pathway, designed for students who do not immunise as part of their scope of practice, starts by building a base knowledge with the online program, Foundations of Immunisation Support.

Students can then continue on with a choice of four online programs and then move through to the Supporting Immunisation Practice Program, consisting of further learning, a face-to-face workshop and workplace activities.

Successfully completing the pathway means Students will have achieved the nationally accredited Course in Immunisation Support in Primary Healthcare (10764NAT).

The Immunisation Practice pathway, designed for students who do immunise as part of their scope of practice, also begins by building foundational knowledge in our foundational program.

Students can then continue on with a choice of four online programs - options include immunisation needs in pregnancy, influenza, adult and older persons and school aged programs.

Following on is the Practice of Immunisation Program, consisting of further learning, a face-to-face workshop in partnership with PHNs, and workplace activities.

Successfully completing this pathway means students will have achieved the nationally accredited Course in Immunisation Practice in Primary Healthcare (10754NAT).

The Benchmark Group Immunisation Endorsement Program is a HESA (Health Education Services Australia) endorsed, online program for Registered Nurses and Midwives who want the ability to immunise independent of a medical officer. The program is specific to the state or territory the student works in.

Registered nurses and Midwives who successfully complete this program should refer to the Department of Health in the jurisdiction they practice in, or wish to practice in, for information and conditions leading to authorisation.

The following provides a snapshot of each learning option, for further detailed information please visit www.benchmarkgroup.com.au
